

Head of Course Development and Standards - Professional Membership Institute.

Location: London

The Role:

This successful and rapidly growing Professional Membership Institute is looking for a Head of Course Development and Standards to design, deliver and review the Institute's accreditation, standards and frameworks for new and existing products and services.

You will be responsible for the Course Development and Standards team and report into the Directorial team.

This is the perfect opportunity for someone to take a key role within a growing business and really help improve the range of products and services open to new and existing members. The institute currently deals with around 50% of the FTSE 500 and has a fantastic reputation for providing training, qualifications and services to a range of well-known blue chip businesses.

Key Responsibilities:

- Responsible for development, delivery and review of Institute's accreditation, standards and frameworks for new and existing products and services.
- You will oversee the management and delivery of the Institute's portfolio of products and services and manage the Course Development and Standards team.

Experience required:

Knowledge and experience of the design, implementation and delivery of accreditation, assessment and qualifications frameworks is imperative.

It is essential that you are able to demonstrate development and implementation of proven people development and accreditation measures in an education, training and standards environment.

If you are interested in hearing more about this exciting opportunity, please send in your CV by applying today.